

Resilience in Ministry

Macquarie University is seeking participants for a research study.

Past research recognises that those in Christian pastoral ministry face a unique set of demands. In light of recent advances in reflection-based resilience strengthening, this study aims to identify short and long term stressors and the effects of reflection on the resilience of ministry workers.

If you are currently working as an Australian Protestant Christian minister or pastor, please consider sharing your experiences. The on-line survey at the site below will take approximately 25 minutes to complete. The findings of this study will contribute to the development of tailored resilience programs for those in ministry environments. All participants can opt to receive a summary of research findings.
